RESIGNED FROM OFFICE AFTER SHORT REIGN

Was Tenth President of Republic, Having Been Elected February 18, 1920.

WAS A BRILLIANT SPEAKER

Resignation Followed Injury That Resulted in General Nervous Breakdown.

PARIS, April 28.—Paul Deschanel, former president of France died today.

Paul Eugene Louis Deschanel, 19th president of France, entered upon a seven-year term in that office on February 18, 1920, after having been chosen by the national assembly the preceding January by the biggest majority since the election of Thiers, the first president of the republic. Statesman and author and one of the most brilliant public speakers in France, M. Deschanel's political triumph marked the retirement from public life of former Premier Georges Clemenceau.

The campaign had been most sensational and bitter. M. Clemenceau, then at the height of his power as the French war premier and one of the negotiators of the treaty with Germany, was, up until a few days before the election, believed to be the only candidate who had a chance for the office. Catholic and socialist votes in the French parliament, however, combined with those of the political enemies of the "Tiger" and elected Deschanel. A few months later, when Deschanel had been forced by illness to resign, the "Tiger" was asked if he again would permit his name to be used as a candidate for the presidency. "I was too old to be elected last January," he replied ironically, "and I feel too young to accept now. In case I was chosen, I am going into India's jungles to hunt tigers, which is much less dangerous than the French politics."

On May 24, 1920, a few months after taking up his residence at the Elysée palace as the successor of Poincare, President Deschanel, when on his way at night from Paris to Montbrison to dedicate a monument, fell from a moving train while attempting to raise a window in his sleeping compartment. He was supposed to have been only slightly injured. Thereafter, however, the press of France expressed almost daily solicitude for his health. After passing weeks of convalescence in Normandy, he returned to Paris in June to preside at the council of ministers. Later it was announced that he had suffered a complete breakdown and that his resignation was inevitable. The following September, the president sent a letter of resignation to Premier Millerand, together with a message to the senate and chamber of deputies.
